President's Message

Happy February to all Master Gardeners and Interns.

For those of you that were at our first meeting for 2016 I thank you. If you were unable to attend the January 19th get together I encourage you to attend our next meeting February 16th. Each person makes our organization stronger by his/her presence and ideas.

As I am fast approaching a mile stone birthday I have come to the conclusion that getting older does at times have its perks. One learns patience and the awareness that not everything worth while comes all at once. Gardening incorporates this same philosophy. We as gardeners plant in the Spring with hope and anticipation of what will grow and fill us with contentment and even a sense of accomplishment at the end of the growing season. I do have to admit however that my patience is tried as I wait for Spring to arrive and I am able get my fingers in the dirt. Spring is only 54 days away. Oh JOY!

A reminder: Membership dues to Karen Smith by the end of February.

ANR Educator Report

Submitted by Angie Tilton

It is hard to believe that it is already February. Spring will be here before we know it! I have two exciting projects that I am seeking assistance from Master Gardeners on this spring: 1. Demonstration Garden at the Fairgrounds and 2. Master Gardener Resource Center. Please read the project description of the two projects below and consider signing up to volunteer if you are interested.

1. Demonstration Garden: The Fairgrounds would like to have a new feature added to the facility as part of Indiana's Bicentennial and have asked Purdue Extension's to create a demonstration garden on the Fairgrounds that would be available for the public to walk through during the County Fair in July. At this time, I am looking for volunteers who are interested in helping to design, build and plant the garden this spring. I am also looking for volunteers who would be interested in leadership roles with this project too.
2. Resource Center: The Extension office receives hundreds of phone calls every year on various backyard horticulture and gardening questions, concerns and inquiries. To help meet these needs in the community, I will be developing a Master Gardener Resource Center at the Extension Office. Master Gardeners will staff the Resource Center and assist with public inquiries related to backyard horticulture and gardening. I am in the process of developing a training session in partnership with Purdue Extension Hamilton County for Master Gardeners interested in staffing the Resource Center. I am searching for volunteers who would be willing to attend the training and consider helping to staff the Resource Center. (Those volunteers who sign up will be notified first of the training opportunity.)

I had a sign-up sheet at the January meeting and I will continue to bring one to future meetings. If you are interested in volunteering and haven't been able to sign up at one of the meetings, please email Janet at jcunningham@purdue.edu or call the office at 317-745-9260 and let us know which project or projects you would be interested in volunteering for.

As you will see in the President's letter, there are plenty of other exciting opportunities to get involved in and volunteer. I am really looking forward to all that the Hendricks County Master Gardeners have planned for 2016. There are certainly some exciting things growing here already!
